My word is “try”. This word is an important part of my life because it reminds me to keep going and always try my best. I have a disability that makes me walk differently and sometimes it gets really hard. The word “try” reminds me that you should never give up, even in the hardest of times. I show my word at school and at home. “Try” has been a part of my life for a long time and if humanity didn’t “try”, the world would still be very primitive.

I picked this word because when I think about the word, it motivates me to keep going. I show this at school whenever something is hard. Whenever something is difficult, I try my hardest no matter the challenge. XtraMath (a math learning program that speed quizzes you on basic math problems and can be really frustrating at times) is an example. I show my word at home when I go to horseback riding because when I am learning something new, I always try my best. “Try” has been my special word ever since I was little. Even though I didn’t do the real My Special Word until 4th grade, the word “try” has always been a part of my life. Like I said, I have a disability, so my parents always told me they didn’t care how I performed in sports, as long as I tried.

Imagine a world where “try” didn’t exist. No one would do anything because no one would have the motivation. Many medicines would not have been invented because no one would have tried. If “try” didn’t exist, nothing would happen, and humans would still be primitive animals. This is why “try” is my word. “Try” shows us to keep going. “Try” is also an important word because without it, humanity would be utterly useless. This word is very important to me because it’s been a part of my life for a long time. These are some of the reasons why I chose “try” as my special word.
